Biographical/Historical Note:

The International Toastmistress Club (ITC) was started by Ernestine White in 1935, with the help of her husband, George, and Dr. Ralph Smedley. The purpose of the club was to practice public speaking through training programs, speech contests, and writing contests. Officer positions included President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer. The first meeting took place August 11, 1939. Their motto is: "to love our language and use it with grace and facility."

In its beginnings, the ITC only allowed women since men had Toastmasters International. In 1973, both clubs allowed all members to join yet they remained separate entities. ITC continued to 1985, where they changed their name to International Training in Communication. In 2003, they relocated from southern California to Tauranga, New Zealand. Many of the ITC museum pieces remain in the Anaheim Library, which includes the Ernestine White trophy. The organization changed its name again in 2007 to POWERtalk International and continue training members in public speaking.

The Twin City Toastmistress Club was started around 1949. They had 5 regional councils, collectively called "The Ozark Region," each with a President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, and sometimes a Club Representative. They kept track of financial records, meeting minutes, programs hosted and attended, and membership rosters. Meetings usually consisted of improving their public speaking by reading through guidebooks and practice sessions. They would also attend conferences where they would exchange ideas on how to become a better public speaker and a better club leader. Handbooks and manuals were collected by the Twin City Toastmistress Club as a way of keeping things in order for the officers by outlining their duties.

Council Presidents and Treasurers kept in touch with each other through letters, indicating the status of their club and upcoming events. They would also report to ITC in regards to newly elected officers and the number of members their council had, in order to keep its official standing within the parent organization. The Council Treasurer kept track of the club's budget, any expenses spent by the club, and membership dues. News materials were printed by the different regions, promoting speech contests, short stories or poems written by club members, and any changes or additions to the council.

Scope and Content Note:

The Twin City Toastmistress Collection was donated to the Champaign County Historical Archives in August 2013 by Judy Grussing. It is a collection that documents the works and duties of the treasurer, handbooks and guidelines for officers, as well as membership information, speech contests, and events hosted by the Toastmistress Club.

The financial records document the membership dues, costs of events hosted, receipts kept by the treasurer, various budgets and balances, and audit materials. The treasurer kept track of members and their payments, which were reported to the International Toastmistress Club. Some of the events they would host include dinners and speech contests. There are different order forms for speech books, deposits addressed to the treasurer of that year. Audit materials kept record of the financial statements in making sure everything was in order.

The operational materials include handbooks and manuals, specific regional membership information, flyers and submissions of speech contests and other events, and correspondence. The handbooks and manuals list the duties of the President and Treasurer, Bylaws, and procedures in conducting a Toastmistress Club. Informal "how to" guides focus on becoming a better leader, as well as from the different Midwest areas. The Ozark Region had 5 councils, which kept track of their officers and contact information. The Toastmistress Club had different newsletters: The Carillon, Communique, Leads for Leaders, Directory of the Toastmistress Club, and The Ozark Region-Aire. The Toastmistress Club would host dinner and awards events, each with its own theme. The five councils of the Ozark Region would participate in speech contests with guidelines of the topic, procedures, and presentation.
